

Working beyond boundaries

A blueprint for delivering the government's estate strategy

“As a co-author of ‘Working beyond walls’ (published 2008) I know the value of that publication as a trusted source of information and case study examples.

With more ambitious challenges set by the Government’s Estate Strategy (2014), PLACEmaking know from feedback there is demand for the next iteration of shared knowledge and reliable sources of information: something that is more instant, more modern, more accessible and more valuable day to day.”

Alison White, co-founder of PLACEmaking

Working beyond boundaries is intended to deliver all of those things: providing country wide masterclass events, supported by access to a toolbox of blueprints and templates for people, platforms and place change offering tailored on-going support for internal delivery teams during implementation. This unique approach is intended to provide access to creativity, expertise and experience.

We will be launching ‘Working beyond boundaries’ at an event in Bristol - Spring 2015 with four individually themed events throughout 2015/16.

Please join us at these events. Register your interest at www.placemaking.co.uk and we will provide you with all the relevant information.
